Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 3, 5, and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ito (US 5,476,618) in view of JP 10-077359 substantially as set forth in Paper no. 7.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claim 9 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. None of the prior art discloses or suggests that the surface layer is fusion bonded directly to the foam layer of the polyolefin resin molding composite recited in claim 1.

Response to Arguments

4. The claim objections have been overcome by the present amendment and response.
5. The 103 art rejections over Ito in view of JP 10-077359 have been maintained for the following reasons. In the first place, Applicants argue that Ito teaches away from the claimed invention because Ito teaches that in order to achieve a laminate having good surface quality, the thermoplastic resin sheet between the foam layer and the skin layer is required. The arguments are not commensurate in scope with the claims. Nothing in the claims is specific about the absence of the thermoplastic resin plastic sheet as discussed by Applicants. The open-ended language "comprising" in the claims clearly does not exclude the presence of the thermoplastic resin sheet in the composite material. Secondly, the arguments that Ito as modified by JP'359 does not teach or suggest the presently claimed compressive hardness are not found persuasive for patentability. It appears that expanded bead resin foam of Ito in view of JP'359 is substantially identical to the presently claimed foam layer because both are comprised of a core comprising a crystalline thermoplastic resin in an expanded state and an ethylene-base polymer coat in a substantially unexpanded state, the ethylene-base polymer being lower in melting point than the core resin or which having substantially no melting point [0007]. It is not seen that the foam layer of Ito in view of JP'359 would have possessed the compressive hardness outside the range as claimed by the present invention. This is in line with In re Spada, 15 USPQ 2d 1655 (1990). Products of identical chemical composition can not have mutually exclusive properties. Putting these things together, the 103 art rejections are thus sustained.

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

Art Unit: 1771
